When Little City will not provide a privacy notice to data subjects

If you are booking a play session for multiple children, Little City requires the person booking to provide the name of each child attending the session. This is to provide Little City with a register of those at a play session for health and safety purposes. As we process each child's name by recording and storing it on a register of attendees, Little City is obliged to notify each adult who holds parental responsibility for such a child of this processing. In situations where one adult books a play session on behalf of multiple children, Little City is under an obligation to provide a privacy notice to each parent detailing Little City's processing of their child's name. To provide this information, this would involve Little City requesting the contact details and then contacting the parent of each child booked to attend the session.

Given the personal data being processed is limited to a child's name and the purpose of processing is limited to managing safety, Little City considers that providing a privacy notice to each parent in the above situation would require a disproportionate effort from Little City. Relying on the 'disproportionate effort' legal exemption means that Little City is not obliged to provide such a Privacy Notice. Little City has carried out an assessment of the above approach to confirm it is a proportionate approach.

How we get the personal information and why we have it

We may collect personal information:

- directly from you:
 - in person, by telephone, email or direct contact from you via Facebook or Instagram;
 - when you complete our online booking forms; and/or
 - when you visit our website: <https://www.littlecityuk.com/>.
- directly from a third party, for example:
 - bookwhen.com ('Bookwhen') and HOOP – these are two separate online booking and reservation systems which collect your data when you book a LittleCity session using either of these platforms.
 - Stripe – when you book through Bookwhen or HOOP, Stripe processes your payment details and we will access only the details necessary to provide you with a refund.

Sharing your personal information

We will only share your personal information with:

- The Panda Party Company if, at the time you make a booking, you select 'Yes' to order party bags, and we will pass your name, telephone number and email address to The Panda Party Company. The Panda Party Company will then make contact with you to organise the sale of party bags.
- Little City has a number of franchises. In the unlikely event that a particular Little City service provider is unable to attend an event, a member of the franchise will provide cover for that event, and the booking information relevant to the play session will be shared with that member providing cover.
